It was a trip I'll never forget. Mostly because of how bizzare the whole idea had sounded. If you live in a family where at least two people work or study 24/7, so the best way of spending a weekend is to (finally!) sit down and watch TV, you may relate. 4/ Lex

Yet one day we packed everything up and went on some kind of a highland picnic. Just in time to get stuck in the middle of nowhere because our car broke down. So, the only solution of this challenging situation was either to wait for other driver to drive by, or to look for one. Luckily, there was a car not very far from us, but it was empty. 110 Gr

'Still the car won't repair itself', my dad said. 'I think the owners of this one might be somewhere... look, there is someone!' On the spot he was looking at was a small family. Father in a green coat, mother, their daughter - she was six years old, I guess. And now, one can imagine the scene when a confused and a completely foreign teen approaches them, and asks after an awkward pause: 'Excuse me, is this your car?' 47

Don't worry though, our weekend trip wasn't ruined. After all, the ¹⁰⁰landscapes out there are picturesque and tranquil, the weather great, and... well, I've got a feeling that this little family we've met is now reading this. In case you are. I just want to thank you for not being ignorant and helping us. Oh yes, and also for being humorous enough to understand my brother. By the way, you're the most blissful and cutest family I've ever seen. Gr
