It was a trip I'll never forget. We were travelling to London by car and it was the fifth day of the trip. There were three of us: me, my mom and my older brother. You can see us on the photo. The fair-haired woman with a checked blanket on her shoulders is my mom and the tall man in a striped hat is my brother Ben.

As I said, we were travelling by car but then a bewildering thing happened. Suddenly the car broke down! "Oh dear! How are we supposed to continue our trip?" my mom cried. Ben claimed that there might have been a problem with the engine. We were confused and afraid. Ben went somewhere to call for a help. Fortunately, the car had broken down near a hotel so we were able to stay there until the car has been repaired.

After that bizarre event we continued our way. It was quite challenging but we managed to arrive on time. However, we hadn't reached the city yet and stopped to enjoy a fascinating landscape. We took a few photographs of the breathtaking scenery. We were about to go but another unpleasant thing occurred. Can you imagine six wild dogs in front of you barking and roaring? I shouted "Get away! Don't come closer!" and ran into the car scared to death. But dogs ran after me! They were supposed to bite me! Luckily, Ben defended us and we left this place as fast as a flash!

Anyway, in the end everything was fine. Recalling this brings it home to me that I'll never go travelling by car again!
