It was a trip I'll never forget.

I ~~have never~~ ^{haven't} been a big fan of camping, so when I got the bewildering news that we ~~were~~ ^{were} going on ~~the~~ family trip, I was shocked. I tried to tell my Mum off this horrible idea, but she was completely ignorant.

As I expected, the trip was challenging as I didn't have a slightest idea what to wear. My little sister, however, was not that confused: she brought her favourite coloured scarf, which is seen in the picture.

By the end of the day, we ~~arrived~~ were on a huge forest clearing.

"Mum, I want to go back!" I immediately whined.

"Honey, we decided to stay here for a couple of days, didn't we?" answered she.

"Eh. Right" was all I managed.

Despite my reluctance, I couldn't help admiring the scenery. Then I understood my mother was acting brzrate.

"What's wrong, Mum?"

"Nothing sweetie," she said, adjusting her blanket and ponytail. "I was just ... thinking."

"About what?"

"About your granddad."

I went frozen on the spot. I've never heard about my dead granddad ^{before} so I asked Mum tell me about him.

When I was listening, I burst out crying. My granddad was a wonderful man, caring and passionate. That clearing was his and my mother's favourite place.

I took this photo as a reminder of that day. Now going to that clearing is a family tradition. I think, it is the best way to show our granddad our reverencing and unconditional love for him.
