Introduction

The purpose of this report is to outline the data on English museums and galleries, collected for three separate years.

Summarizing of the data

The results of the search clearly show, that British Museum is the most popular spot and its popularity has increased respectively over years. What is more, there is a substantial increase of attendance of National Gallery. This shows that people are highly interested in their exhibitions, ~~and so~~ so I can admit, that in this case promotional strategies are satisfying.

Comparisons

Moreover, the data implies that the attendance of Tate gallery has increased since 2013. It was the least popular place to go, but now gallery's ratings draw on steadily. These results can be to British Museum's ones. It also moved from one of the least favourable spots to the most popular one in 2017. Unfortunately, the unpleasant situation can be seen if we speak about Natural History Museum and Science Museum. Although in 2013 both of them had a high rate, nowadays their attendance has decreased significantly.

Recommendations

Taking these facts into consideration, I can make a couple of suggestions considering the ways to increase people's attendance. Firstly, to appeal the public you could start a new promotional company: make brand new billboards, for example. Also, it is a good idea to introduce new extraordinary exhibitions.

Conclusion

In general, I can maintain that the attendance of museums and galleries is showing a favourable rise. Yet there is always a place to grow and some changes ~~will not~~ won't be irrelevant.
